SWEETHEARTS of the DICTATORS

Lida Baarevo, German film star and illicit sweetheart of Joseph Goebbels. Goebbels was harassed by her husband.

Goebbels posing with his wife whom he betrayed by his affair with the German film star.

What kind of women do dictators go for? Dictators are human beings (almost) and they meet at times thrill to the enticing charms of the gentler sex. But the sweethearts of dictators are few and far between. Dictators and their satellites, one and all, are pathological cases, and there is little room in their disordered and insane emotions for any normal feelings of natural love and tenderness. It is known that Hitler is almost allergic to women. This abnormal, perverted condition is just another symptom of the derangement of this madman whose paranoid hallucinations have spread to the German nation and caused the tragic slaughter in Europe. Tens of thousands of men, women and children now dead would still be alive today if Hitler in his youth had found normal release and natural happiness in the soft, white arms of some attractive Austrian woman.

Joseph Goebbels, Nazi Minister of Propaganda, who used his position in the German movies to indulge his illicit passion.

Unity Mitford returns to England on a stretcher after a quarrel with her hero, Hitler.

Unity Mitford, the English girl whom Hitler called "The Ideal Nordic Woman." Did they have an affair?

Three dancers who thrilled Hitler, Lena Baldwin, Rose Nuth and Marjorie Ascat. But it was only their dancing that thrilled him.

Hitler with the actress Leni Riefenstahl. She was supposed to have been Hitler's sweetheart. But the rumor may have been spread to counteract reports of Hitler's abnormal lack of a natural interest in women.

Mussolini's sweetheart, the French journalist Mme. Magda de Fantages. She shot the French Count de Chambrun, whom she accused of breaking up her affair with the Italian dictator, Mussolini, although married, is quite a ladies' man. He is more of a normal human being than is the German paranoiac who has outwitted him.

HOW COLLEGE GIRLS CHEAT

Who said that all college girls are studious grinds who wear thick glasses and know too much for their own good? It just isn't so. Not all college girls study, and SLICK can prove it. When that nasty old examination time rolls around, the pretty little campus cuties of Smith, Vassar, Wellesley and assorted girls' colleges can show the hardened rah-rah men of Harvard, Yale and Princeton a trick or two about that ancient and dishonorable institution known as cribbing that would make their eyes pop. The college gals can cheat with the best of them. It is only a dumb girl who never went to college who thinks that a crib is just something you put the baby in. A really popular college gal has to spend so much time and thought on her social dates that she can't possibly keep those dull history dates in her cute little head without the help of a little harmless cribbing. And how these gals can crib! It's positively ingenious. It's a joy to watch them work. There doesn't seem to be very much to the modern girl's clothing, but just the same there are plenty of places where a cutie who has missed too many lectures can hide enough notes to pass the stiffest examination with flying colors. And so, brother, when you meet a college gal graduate don't be too sure that she knows all the answers. She may be beautiful and just as dumb as you are. Perhaps she got her college degree with the same kind of cheating that you used to get yours.

And here's another dodge. The girl hides her notes just under the top of her thin silk stocking. Thus she will pass by sheer deception.

Some of the cribbing methods the girls use are positively ingenious. Here's a favorite trick.

A loose-fitting shoe makes the perfect hiding place for a nest of handy notes about those baffling math problems. It takes a bit of nifty footwork to beat those cruel examiners.

The short panties, too, are so practical for cribbing purposes. A rubber band holds the chemistry notes in place, and all the pretty student has to do is copy them. She'll pass by a pontie!

Now we go from step-in to instep. A piece of paper glued on the bottom of a girl's shoe can be an invaluable aid. She puts her sole into her work. It is much easier for a pretty girl to keep her knowledge under foot than in her head.

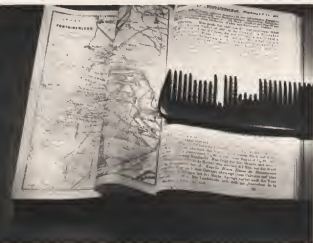

As you can see, this girl spornely dressed as she is, still has almost innumerable places on her person where she can conceal cribs. The opening of a zipper gives access to another piece of paper pinned inside to her blouse. One zip and she knows all the answers.

SMUGGLED OUT OF GERMANY

When you read in your newspaper or hear over the radio that such and such information was smuggled out of Germany by private "pipelines" or through underground channels you often wonder just how the trick was turned. Germany at war is one of the most tightly locked countries on earth today. Expert censors are constantly on guard lest leaks occur to give information to the many enemies of the Nazi dictatorship. Yet, expert and ruthless as are the German secret police, they can still be thwarted by brave men and women who dare to risk their lives in getting vital information out of Germany, so that the world may know of the foul deeds of the Nazis. These men and women must have brains as well as matchless courage in order to outwit the human bloodhounds of the Gestapo. Here are some of the ingenious methods by which information was smuggled past the ever-watchful censors. Needless to say, SLICK is not endangering the lives of the information-smugglers by revealing these methods. No means of smuggling secrets is ever used twice by these informants. The Germans are far too clever for that to be possible. But new methods just as ingenious are constantly being invented and made use of. Thus a constant trickle of information leaks out of Germany to be used against the Nazis by the embattled Democracies. In these terrible days it is a cheering and inspiring thought that even in today's Germany there are alert and resourceful men and women who are so disgusted with the brutal dictatorship of the Nazis that they are willing to risk imprisonment in the awful concentration camps, a fate that is literally worse than death, to keep the civilized world informed about conditions in their country. The spirit of freedom and decency can never be entirely stamped out no matter what brutal methods are used. Millions may be so terrorized as never to lift a finger against their oppressors, but somewhere there will always be a few who will keep the torch of liberty alight in their hearts and who will fight on as long as they have the breath of life in their bodies.

On the fingernails of a woman traveler from Germany was written a code message describing the exact location of certain airplane factories near Berlin. The message was then covered by a fashionable shade of red polish. Thus a woman's hand enabled the R.A.F. to do more damage to the Nazi air force.

A German guide book to Paris was shipped out of Germany. In another package a broken-toothed comb was included among some knickknacks. Two homeless girls, thought the censors. But the jagged teeth of the comb when placed on a certain part of a page of the guide book revealed some very interesting information.

Notes for an article in a New York newspaper about a split in the German high command were smuggled out of Germany on rolls of thin paper concealed in the tobacco of these cigarettes. More notes were written on the back of the playing card hidden in the center of the cake of soap. Thus the world learned of bitter quarrels among the Nazis in power.

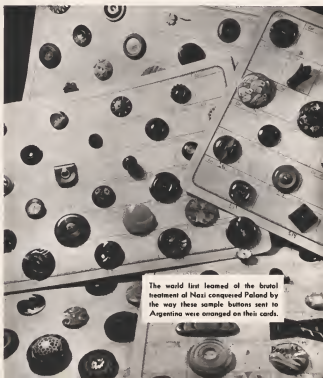

These "harmless" clippings from a French newspaper in occupied Paris were sent to Lisbon by an anti-Nazi German who was visiting the former French capital. From Lisbon they were forwarded to London. Unfortunately they were delayed in the Portuguese city.

The same "harmless" clippings after they had been treated with a secret chemical. They now reveal a message in code that tells of German troop movements through France on their way to North Africa. Had these clippings not been delayed in Lisbon the British would not have been surprised by the Nazi strength in Libya.

These postage stamps were torn in a special way to convey information about a massacre of Czech students by the Nazis. More information was written under the pills in the handy pill container.

The world first learned of the brutal treatment of Nazi conquered Poland by the way these sample buttons sent to Argentina were arranged on these cards.

THE NAZI MENACE IN SOUTH AMERICA

Are the Nazis creeping into South America while the U. S. sleeps? Are these murderous plotters secretly gaining a first foothold that may enable them later to wreck our trade; to turn these now friendly countries against us by their vicious totalitarian ideas? And finally, to actually invade our country? America is most vulnerable to attack from the South. There are several South and Central American countries that possess landing fields which are but a few short hours of flight from the vital Panama Canal. Let just a few huge bombs strike home on the locks of that big ditch and our navy would immediately be split into two helpless parts. The Nazis are well aware of this fact. For years German "tourists" have been infiltrating into South America. These "tourists" have not come merely to admire the scenery. Every Nazi visiting a foreign land or settling in a foreign country is first of all a secret agent of Germany carrying exact instructions as to his or her part in the foul plot known as "The New Order" that aims to master the whole world and to strangle the last vestiges of individual freedom which still survive only in the British Empire and in the Western hemisphere. Slowly, bit by bit, these Nazis are worming themselves into strategic places in every South American country. Many of these "tourists" are expert technicians and hence find it easy to secure positions in vital industries. Others are such good airplane pilots and mechanics that many Latin American airlines find it impossible to function without their help.

Still others are expert in modern military training and thus they are sometimes hired to train the troops of a South American country. German military advisors were used by both sides in the Paraguay-Bolivian war. It is easy to see to what use these insidious "tourists" could put their inside knowledge of South American army matters and the secrets of high politics entrusted to them so innocently. Wherever there are German "tourists" and German settlers there are inevitably German "culture" societies and German "sporting" associations. In these bands and clubs the "tourists" pool the information and the secrets they have gathered and arrange for more "tourists" to infiltrate further and further into the structure of Latin American society. Yes, the Nazis ARE creeping into South America! They are already so firmly entrenched there that it will now be almost impossible to dislodge them by any half measures. No amount of Good Neighbor Policy or amateurish counter propaganda can now serve to completely uproot them. What then must we do? There is only one thing left. We must strike hard at Nazism at its source; strike at it hard in Germany itself, by total and all out aid to Britain. Only when the Nazis in Germany are destroyed by Britain and the British fleet will we be safe from the danger of actual invasion from South America. Must our fleet be cut in half and our cities laid in ruins by German bombers based in Latin American countries before we fully awaken to the menace of the Nazis in South America?

A Bolivian sentry guards ammunition which was shipped to Bolivia just before the outbreak of the war. Note the German text on the boxes. Although the Nazis knew they would soon be at war they shipped heavy cargoes of ammunition to South America. Why?

A German boat club in Buenos Aires which is also the headquarters of the Nazi party in Argentina. Note the swastika flag on the pole. What Fifth Column plots against Argentina and finally against the U. S. are these "boat club" members plotting?

Club Hipico Aleman reads the sign at the German Horsemen's Club in Caracas in Venezuela. This club, or bund, is a hotbed of Nazism. The Nazi "tourists" always disguise their insidious activities as mere clubs for the enjoyment of harmless sport.

This is a pier of the German Condor Airline near La Paz, Bolivia. All employees are German, and probably all are Nazi secret agents as well as expert pilots and mechanics. Some landing fields in Bolivia are but a few short hours of flight from the Panama Canal. Every Condor transport plane could be made into a bomber almost over night.

Daughters of Germans in Guatemala City, Guatemala, parading on the grounds of their German Club and giving the feminis version of the Nazi salute. There are many thousands of Germans in Guatemala and a strong Nazi movement. The Republic of Guatemala is a Central American country that is even nearer to the Panama Canal than is Bolivia. What are we going to do about it?

...EARL MORAN AND HIS CALENDAR GALS...

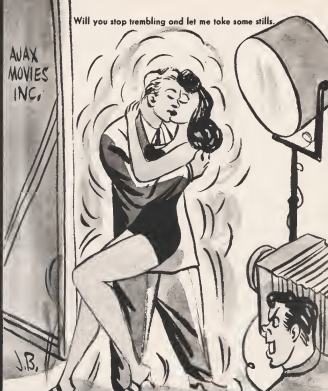

Peggy depicts a drum major.

Earl Moran is the talented artist who paints those glamorous "Hatcho" calendars which are used to sell soft drinks, candy bars, sewing machines, nuts and bolts and innumerable other articles of merchandise. A pretty girl will help to sell anything from a locomotive to a glass of beer. It is Moran's job to give calendars sex appeal and he paints girls who are so beautiful that they are practically unbelievable. Every girl who poses for Earl Moran must have fresh, youthful charm, curves in the proper places and a nice, cheerful smile. In life, these girls are gorgeous, but after Earl has idealized their charms on his canvas, they are—well—astounding. If a man gives just one glance at an Earl Moran calendar to get the right date he will immediately think of getting another and more exciting kind of date. He will hope that it will be with a girl shaped like the one on his calendar, but he will probably be slightly disappointed. Girls in real life are not built in quite the way Earl paints them—but don't we wish they were? Moran has an imagination that adds a certain something to the feminine shape. An Earl Moran calendar on the wall makes the months pass more pleasantly. His employees, The Brown & Bigelow Calendar Company, have found that the Earl Moran "Hatcho" girls are more popular than even Peggy's famous cuties. Moran's favorite model is his twenty-year-old daughter, Peggy, who has started a career of her own as a movie and radio actress. But she is so busy in Hollywood that Earl must get other models to fill in.

BURGLAR IN HOLLYWOOD

All towns look alike to a burglar. But Hollywood is different. A light-fingered gent with a yen for other folks' baubles leads a dog's life in this village of the flickers and home of the screen test. The overage burglar is strictly a man's man, a rough and ready fellow who minds his own business trying to make a dishonest penny to feed his hungry brots. He has no talent for handling the vigorous womanhood of celluloid row. These frails are no timid housewives who hide under the bed at the mere sound of what might be a burglar. They are galloping gals with temperament, toughness and terror. And a man who lets himself be pushed around by the buxom belles of Beverly Hills is better off dead. The meeker moles of Glomor Town-on-the-Pacific are for outnumbered by the huge population of dizzy, dazling dames, the winners of beauty contests all over the world. Hollywood is a girls' town by an easy four to one. This sad statistical fact causes the shopely sisters to compete for their men with all the ferocity of starving Bengal tigresses. With tooth and nail and with many a yonk of lovely hair-dos the Hollywood squaws battle for their bucks like a couple of rival bull moose in the Northern woods. In a fight for a male there is no quarter given or asked. To the heart-hungry glomor gals of screenland any heel in pants is worth a scrap. In Hollywood even a burglar is more than a mere crook. He is a male, a creature who could escort a gal to the Trocadero (if she paid the check) and hence worth battling a roommate for. And what a battle these lovely glomor gals can put up. A mere man, be he crook or honest citizen, will be almost in shreds when these amazing Amazons have fought over him and howled him this way and that in their struggle. A poor, defenseless sneak thief is better off in the cozy jail-house where the cops will give him a third degree that will seem mild in comparison. God help a burglar in a town like this!

"He's mine, I tell you!"

"I want a policeman!"

"Leave me alone!"

"Goodbye! I'll be better off in jail!"

"I'll put over a fast one!"

BASEBALL CURVES

Because every second male in the country is a rabid baseball fan who talks and thinks baseball scores to the exclusion of almost everything else, it is up to the gorgeous girlies to show that they, too, are hep to the fine points of the national sport if they wish to attract masculine attention. Here's the tip-off on the way to do it, girlies. Here's how to be the belle of the ball-fans. Just remember that the guy who might put a diamond on your finger has the baseball diamond on his mind. So get your pretty paws on a mitt, a bat and a ball and learn to play the game. If a gal can play baseball, the men will be sure that she is a good sport. And if she shows those breath-taking curves, the boys will be certain that she has plenty on the ball. When she goes to bat she will be a striking beauty, but she will be sure to make a hit. And in a clear field she will make a good catch. Taking an interest in baseball is the only way a modern girl can get to first base with the modern men. But after she has made her catch she can relax and go to the showers. Then she must begin the new game of teaching her man that the word "home" means more than just the plate that the umpire dusts off.

"And I'll show
'em some curves!"

The babe's at bat.

"It's all mine!"

Safe at third!

"Ouch! I muffed it!"

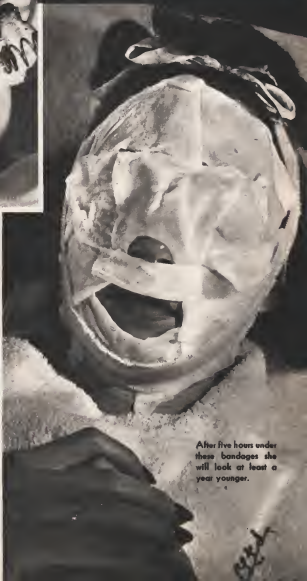

TORTURE FOR BEAUTY

These ghastly pictures are not uncensored photos of war victims. They are merely candid shots to show what women go through in beauty parlors. The lady on the left is being de-wrinkled.

This woman in the iron mask will have a smoother face when the weight is removed.

After five hours under these bandages she will look at least a year younger.

Curves in concrete! There are no discomforts too grotesque for a woman to endure when she is on the eternal quest for beauty. She will lie unmoving for hours while plaster, reinforced with netting, hardens like cement over her features. When the cement-like stuff is finally chipped off, all the little hairs on the face come off, too—by the roots. The pain is terrific, but that does not matter if only she looks a trifle better, a trifle younger than she did before.

The perfected plan! Well, at last the ordeal is over, and the lady's face comes out into the light of day once more. And here is the total result of all those pains and tortures, all those long, long hours of aching discomfort. The new plan is ready for your critical inspection. How does it look? Not bad, not bad at all! In fact, she's all right. If beauty parlors make women look like this, then more power to them. They should be made compulsory for some dames we know.

WHAT CHORUS GIRLS DO IN THEIR SPARE TIME

A curious and nose reader with a thirst for really educational knowledge has written a letter to SLICK asking us to publish a series of pictures to show what chorus girls do in their spare time. It seems that he wants to know. So, look, we've done it! Let our faithful reader glance over these amazing candid camera shots and his question will be answered. Always willing to oblige a reader, we asked our best candid camera man if he would mind doing a little snooping behind the scenes of Hollywood's famous Florentine Gardens night spot where the shopely girlies of the NTG Revue covort nightly. Although a married mon, and a trifle bashful, our photographer did his duty. He went to the Florentine Gardens, he snooped behind the scenes and he recorded for posterity exactly what each girl was doing to kill time while waiting for the next show. We hope our curious reader is satisfied. We hope everybody is satisfied, now that they know exactly what chorus girls do in their spare time.

The lovely girlie above simply relaxes and lets her thoughts wander where they will, while the shopely miss below improves her mind by reading educational mogazines like SLICK, CLOSE-UP and THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

How the fight started. "Laugh at me, will you?"

No holds barred! She's down with the grip!

BELLES OF THE BRAWL!

When two buxom beauties battle there's a chance for some SLICK photography of the fighting frenzy. The grappling gals don't believe in any silly old Marquis of Queensberry rules when they go into blitzkrieg action.

A kick in the breadbasket!
